THE INTELLIGENCER.

WHEELING, MAY 22, 1900.

Continued Lawlessness.

The management of the Wheeling base ball club continued their open and insulting defiance of the law by again playing ball on the Sabbath. They went through the usual mockery of submitting to arrest, and entering into a reconnaissance for their appearance before the arresting justice. The claim put forth by these Sabbath desecrators that they cannot be arrested twice for the same offense we do not think will hold water if the law is given the strict interpretation it deserves. The law was intended to prevent any Sabbath desecration. Giving it the most liberal interpretation we do not think it was framed to allow persons to return to their desecration after being put under arrest. Suppose we apply the same logic to a man who is arrested for fighting, and ten minutes after he is released on bail, he goes out and fights the same man; will any rational being maintain that he cannot be arrested again? Yet it is the same offense.

Take another parallel case. A saloon keeper is arrested and fined for selling on Sunday. He is not only liable to one fine, but can be made pay for selling every individual drink. It is a cumulative offense, and so it should be with base ball. If a saloon keeper can be fined for every individual drink sold why should not the base ball club be fined for every ball pitched. It is the intention of the law to prevent Sabbath desecration, not to license it by the payment of a nominal fine. The way the statute is interpreted is simply farcical.

One argument has been brought forward by the defenders of Sunday ball that the majority of the people in the city favor an indulgence in the pastime on the Sabbath. This is not true by any means. It is simply a noisy minority that favors the fracturing of the law. There were 2,012 paid admissions to the ball park last Sunday. There were three excursions to Wheeling on three roads, bringing in a large number of visitors. Of these persons perhaps 300 attended the ball game. Martin's Ferry, Aetna, Bridgeport and Bellaire, Ohio, were largely drawn on for the composition of the audience, amounting, we will say, to 700. This leaves 1,000 Wheeling people who witnessed the game. Well, will it not take some very fine figuring to find out how much of a majority 1,000—or give them 2,000, throwing in a thousand misled sympathizers who were not present, not having the price—is of the 45,000 people Wheeling claims to have. There is no rhyme, reason or justice in any of the contentions advanced by these Sabbath breakers. But it seems the noisy minority will have its way, but just so sure as there is law in the land a day of reckoning is at hand.

Value of a Good Name.

A man's credit is frequently as good as capital. Confidence in a man's word is equally advantageous in business, and in these days of haste in making fortunes, over-speculation and questionable methods in business transactions it is a relief to discover men who are true to their word and scrupulously careful of their honor and integrity. Not that there are so few of them, but we hear less of this class than we do of those who are detected in unprincipled schemes. The New York Times presents two cases that are not only striking in contrast, but serve as a warning to men who are on the verge of leaving the path of probity and uprightness. That paper says:

"Time was when a change of environment and the formation of new connections a business man who had kept within the revised statutes to the extent of keeping out of jail could balance the record of his past and open a new account with fortune. This is becoming increasingly difficult. The very perfect machinery of investigation maintained by the commercial agencies, supplemented by the even more searching analysis of the associations of manufacturers, merchants and financial institutions formed for mutual information and protection, give the man with a shady past or a record clouded by wrong-doing very little chance to escape recognition, however disguised. The more secure he fancies himself behind the ornamental facade of a new and attractive venture the more certain he may be that those who have an interest in knowing all about him can do so with very little trouble. How much this tends to re-establish the value of character as a factor in the equation of a business rating those best know who lack it. A gratifying evidence of this was shown us a few days ago by a merchant who had obtained from the secretary of a protective association a reply to an inquiry relating to a dealer in an interior city, from which we are permitted to quote, as follows:

"The firm consists of _____ and his nephew. They have a working capital of $25,000 to $30,000, and could probably employ more. The head of the firm failed in 1888, with liabilities of $100,000, and in 1891 asked and obtained an extension. In both instances the circumstances were such as to relieve Mr. _____ of any suspicion of dishonesty or incapacity. His settlements were satisfactory, and his creditors at the time of the misfortune are now his best business friends. He is a man of high character, with a reputation for frankness and truthfulness. He is conservative and prudent, lives within his means, and is attentive to business. Those from whom we have made inquiries, including the local banks and dealers in the same line of business, agree that he is strictly honorable and trustworthy, and the president of the bank in which he keeps his account writes us: 'Without Mr. _____ says about his business I should consider better entitled to credence than anything learned from outside sources. In our board room, where his accounts are accepted without question, and during nearly fifteen years of business with him we have learned to regard him as a customer whose integrity is of value, and to whom we will extend any accommodation consistent with sound banking.'"

"In contrast to this we are able to give the special report of a leading commercial agency respecting a business man just now somewhat prominent in the public notice:

"His personal fortune is variously estimated from $25,000 to $50,000, but it is understood he is ambitious to be ranked much higher. Many well-informed bankers with whom he has done more or less business doubt that he is worth anything like $25,000. His property consists mainly in the stocks and bonds of enterprises with which he has been identified as a promoter, and which it is not believed he holds for any other reason than that he could not unload them without a sacrifice. As to his personal business he is extremely secretive, and how serious his character is not considered good by those who have had important dealings with him, and his habits are not such as to warrant confidence. He gambles heavily, but under conditions which make it difficult for any estimate of his gains or losses. He is not considered truthful by those who know him, and many do not hesitate to declare they would not believe him under oath in any matter touching his own interests. His credit is simply a question of his collateral, which of late has been scrutinized closely. His identification with a business would not commend it to conservative bankers nor to prudent investors."

"These extracts from current business correspondence are significant as establishing the growing recognition by those who guard credits of the value of character. They warrant the conviction that in the near future the business world will be less dazzled by the glitter of more or less intangible millions, and be better able to estimate correctly the probable analysis of those who are behind them and in whose hands they will develop success or failure."

An Amazing Stride.

A great deal has been said about the wonderful record this country has made in the past two years in exports to European countries, and little attention has been paid to our growing trade with Asia and Oceania. It is pleasing therefore, to note that the Pacific side of the United States comes up smiling with a record comparatively as good as that credited to the Atlantic side. A recent statement of the government calls attention to the remarkable fact that our exports to the far east in the fiscal year which ends with the month of June, will for the first time in our history exceed $100,000,000. In no part of the world has our export trade grown with such amazing rapidity, with the single exception of Africa. In 1893 our total exports to all Asia and Oceania amounted to only $27,421,831, so that in the fiscal year now about to end they will be about four times as great as those of eight years earlier. Imports from that part of the world are also growing rapidly because of the large increase in the share of our sugar supply, which now comes from the islands of the Pacific. More than one-half the sugar imported into the United States now comes from the East Indies and Hawaiian Islands. Of the 2,891,806,558 pounds imported into the United States in the nine months ending with March, 1900, 1,533,415,397 pounds came from the East Indies and the Philippine and Hawaiian Islands; the amount from the East Indies alone being 1,143,025,446 pounds; from the Hawaiian Islands 360,899,409 pounds and from the Philippines 49,490,542. The quantity imported from the Philippines in the nine months ending with March, 1900, is three times as much as in the corresponding months of 1898, and from the East Indies it is two and one-half times as much as in the corresponding period of 1898.

The growth in exports to Asia and Oceania is chiefly in cotton, breadstuffs, provisions and manufacturers. Exports of agricultural machinery to British Australasia in the nine months ending with March, 1900, were $609,323, against $346,550 in the corresponding months of 1898. Exports of flour to China in the nine months ending with March, 1900, was 46,961 barrels against 14,616 barrels in the same months of 1898, to Japan 417,430 barrels against 107,401 barrels in the same months of 1898, and to Hong Kong 1,009,248 barrels against 647,688 barrels in the same months of 1898. Carriages and cars to Australia amounted to $412,254 against $251,802 in the corresponding months of 1898; cotton cloth to China in the nine months ending with March, 1900, was 156,830,255 yards against 77,990,676 yards in the corresponding months of 1898. Raw cotton exported to Japan amounted in the nine months ending with March, 1900, to $11,517,968 as against $5,843,711 in the same months of 1898. Builders' hardware exported to Asia and Oceania in the nine months ending with March, 1900, amounted to $1,254,000, an increase of 50 per cent over the same months of 1898, while boots and shoes to Asia and Oceania in the nine months ending with March, 1900, reached nearly $1,000,000 against a quarter of a million in the same months of 1898.

The Kentucky Villainy.

The adverse decision of the United States supreme court in the Kentucky election case, which sustains the action of the legislature in defeating the will of the people and nullifying Taylor's election as governor of the state, is not in the nature of a surprise, as there was no cause for federal interference. It was not a unanimous opinion of the court, three of the justices differing in some minor points contained in the opinion read by the chief justice dismissing the writ of error. The main averment of the court that it had no jurisdiction in the matter appears to be well taken, as the legislation was against the action of the legislature, which undoubtedly has the power under the constitution of Kentucky to be the exclusive judge of the qualifications of the officers of that commonwealth. The impotency of the supreme court to act in this matter is to be deplored, but that fact in no way removes the odium that attaches to the legislature and the cabal that was led by Goebel to over-ride the expressed will of the people. The stain still rests on the state. What the Goebel Democracy will profit by one of the most nefarious schemes ever concocted in the political history of the country remains to be seen. We believe there is enough true manhood in Kentucky to resent the shame that has been placed on them by the most successful villainy the nation has ever witnessed. Speed the day when the righteous shall triumph.

The action of Hon. C. T. Caldwell in withdrawing his name from the legislative ticket of Wood county, owing to the unequal representation his candidacy would incur, is a sample of the harmony that prevails in the Republican party in this state, and the determination of every man in the ranks to preserve that harmony which is the sure forerunner of success. By the way, the Wood county Republicans made no mistake in selecting Captain S. B. Baker, business manager of the State Journal, as chairman of the county executive committee. With such a man at the head of the party organization we shall expect Wood county to give a splendid account of herself in November.

Less than 100 delegates attended the convention of the Chicago platform Democrats of New York. This handful of Demo-Populists declared if the New York delegation was not instructed for Bryan and the reaffirmation of the platform of 1896, they would hold a convention in June and send a contesting delegation. And they will get in, too.

The senate yesterday, by a vote of 21 to 23, refused to take up the Nicaragua canal bill passed by the house of representatives. There was some opposition to acting on this measure before the report of the Walker commission had been made, which, it is thought, will give information leading to the selection of the most feasible route.

The President has declared through Secretary of State Hay, and that official informed the State delegates, that in the present circumstances, no course is open to him except to persist in the policy of impartial neutrality between England and the South African republics. No reasonable person could have expected any other decision.

It has not been many years since Pittsburgh could give Wheeling cards and spades and beat her out as a wide open Sabbath fracturing city. Now look at her. Tight as the packing of a steam cylinder.

We thought the poet "Icarus" of England would have a poem out of his inner consciousness after all this delirium over the relief of Mafeking. The lines, however, do not rise to the occasion.

Gentlemen of the city council, are you all through; or have some gentlemen not yet spoken in regard to bribes? Such persons will be afforded the opportunity of speaking this evening.

The large vote polled at the Republican primaries of Kanawha county on Saturday shows that the party in that section of the state has gained in strength.

A Foggy Morn in West Virginia.
The fog in snowy whiteness slept,
O'er hill and vale and tree,
All calm and still for miles beyond,
Just like a calm at sea—

With green clad islands here and there,
The tree tops jutting through
Like mountain peaks, whose summits
Reached azure's dome of blue.

While out upon the horizon
A craft with mast and sails
Is seen as from a distant port,
The land again he hails.

Still other craft of quarter build,
Lay anchored in the bay,
And motionless as was the calm
Of that bright summer day.

The scene was grand to look upon,
A wonder very rare,
And with the seven of the world
I trow it would compare.

But now the scene begins to change,
The once all-peaceful calm
Its light has winged; the sky grows dark;
The air is void of balm.

The mist like troubled oceans waver,
And surging to and fro
Begin to break like billows wild
Across each vessel's prow.

The storm grew fiercer, and the waves
A craft before the gale,
Submerging every gallant ship,
'E'en to its topmost rail.

Then leaping on the verdant isles,
And up their mountains steep,
The angry billows climbed, and they
Were swallowed in the deep.

With devastation now entire,
We picture that dark scene
Where rolled a writhing sea of mist
O'er isles once decked in green.

The storm abated, and the gale
Its fury ceased to blow,
To angry waves subsiding
To slumber, and lay low.

The calm returned—an august sight—
Aye, 'twas of former grace,
Through others in profusion rose,
And sought to fill the place.

The clouds were parted, and the rift
Grew wider all the while,
Until the vast and shining sun
Seemed all aglow with smile.

The "waters" then by mystic force
Ascended up on high
In clouds of mist that disappeared
Far up the azure sky.

"The sunken ships" begin to emerge
From out the misty deep,
The islands in their garb of green
To wake, as if from sleep.

The sun shone brilliant o'er the scene,
Diffusing beams of gold,
To break the snowy mists held away,
And like sea billows rolled.

But now a verdant woodland lies—
Aye, 'twas the self-same etc.
Where many seas of mist have formed,
From whence they've taken flight.

But never seems it half so grand
As when in days like these,
When morning fogs have flown, and birds
Pour songs upon the breeze.

St. Louis, Mo.

"I was troubled with material fever of about three years' standing and was under doctors' care for quite a time," writes Mr. J. E. Kidd, of Farmington, Wayne Co., Ky. "They had almost given me up, and my suffering was very great. My pulse was very weak, breath short and I had severe pains in the back of my head and legs. Head palpitation of heart, and from June 1st, 1896, to May 1st, 1897, I was not able to do a day's work. I purchased five bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and before I had finished taking the first two bottles I was very much better. I continued taking the medicine, and by the time the fifth bottle was gone I was a well man."

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cleanses the blood of the poisons which feed disease, cures diseases of the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition, and enables the proper assimilation of food. It is a flesh forming, muscle making medicine, making sound flesh and not flabby fat. It contains no whisky nor alcohol in any form.

The Wheeling Intelligencer is being commended for the firm stand it has taken against Sunday ball playing in that city. The Christian sentiment of the community will surely prove strong enough to put down this open and execrable defiance of the laws of God and man.—Wellburg Herald.

The young man who puts his shoulder to the wheel and labors is respected more than a dressed up, idle dude. It matters not so much what kind of labor it is so that it is labor, either mental or physical. The boy who will take a buck saw and earn something with it rather than be idle, is entitled to the respect of all good people and may be expected to some day fill higher places of trust and honor. It is a worse disgrace to be idle than it is to be a boot-black—Davis Republican.

THERE is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional cure. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J.
